The tentative valuation of real estate for 1914 in this city, exclusive of special franchise valuations, was shown yesterday, when the tax books were opened to the public. There was practically no increase in the assessed valuation of land. Increase in the total valuation was represented mostly by the assessment of new buildings.

The tables made up for the different boroughs provided some interesting fig-715, which made the total increase $168. Senator Clapp's speech brought the au- 125,435. There was some increase also in a part of the Washington Heights section.

The decreases in land values were chiefly in Broadway from Bleecker to 10th street and the abutting side streets; in some of the streets on the East Side between Grand and 14th streets and in that section lying between 14th and 23d streets and Fifth and Sixth avenues. A further decrease was made in the territory north of 131st street and east of Eighth avenue in Harlem.
